JOHN KENNEDY SPOKE FROM THIS ROSTRUM
TO THE MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL COURT ON JANUARY 9, 1964

I carry with me from this state its high and lovely glory to which I now succeed more than fond memories of firm friendships. The enduring qualities of Massachusetts—the economic strength won by the Pilgrims and the Puritans, the Ballouists and the Brahmins, the Yankees and the immigrants—will not be, and could not be, forgotten in this nation's creative mission.

They are an inalienable part of my life, my convictions, my sense of the good, and my hopes for the future.

Courage—judgment—integrity—dedication—these are the historic qualities of the Bay

Colony and the Bay State—the qualities which this state has consistently sent to this chamber on Boston Hill here in Boston and to Capitol Hill back in Washington.

And these are the qualities which, with God's help, this son of Massachusetts hopes will characterize our government's conduct in the four years to come when he should

Thank you very much.

Supporting and Taking Care of Massachusetts National Guard Members and Their Families

Juliette N. Kayyem, Undersecretary for Homeland Security, Executive Office of Public Safety

When Gov. Deval Patrick took office in January, he tasked Secretary of Public Safety Kevin Burke and myself to immediately commence a thorough review of the state of homeland security in the commonwealth. Recognizing the tremendous work that has been done by state agencies and local first responders, our task was to assess the status of current homeland security efforts and to provide guidance on how the state should be thinking about such efforts in light of changing circumstances, and, of course, declining federal support for this important effort.

After months of work, the new State Homeland Security Strategy was released in September. The strategy is guided by three main goals: to create a common operating picture among all homeland security and public safety stakeholders, to strengthen and expand partnerships across assets and capabilities, and to focus efforts on private sector and public participation in prevention and preparedness. Recognizing that the state is ultimately responsible for ensuring the safety and security of its citizens, this strategy builds a strong state structure that is capable of driving and enforcing its strategic vision.

Going forward, this combined focus on state obligation and oversight as well as on cooperation among federal, state and local stakeholders creates an enhanced role for the National Guard in state homeland security efforts. The National Guard has a long and proud history of providing stellar leadership both in times of crisis and times of calm. Our plan is for the Guard to continue in this proud tradition as we call upon it to help coordinate, plan and support numerous efforts spanning from mass evacuation and sheltering to interoperability planning for state and local first responders to exercises and training. The Guard will not only mobilize to respond to disasters, but as a subject-matter expert will play a major role in planning and training. The Guard will also have a number of new projects of its own – from assessing the feasibility of our capacity at Fort Devens to working with state partners outside of public safety for homeland security projects at the Massachusetts Military Reservation.

As the first undersecretary for homeland security, I advise Secretary Burke and the governor's office on both the homeland security efforts of the National Guard, as well as its traditional wartime duties. As to the war, we recognize the tremendous burdens placed on the Guard in these times, and we are working with the new adjutant general, Major General Joseph C. Carter, on one of his most important priorities – to ensure that Guard members and their families are well supported and taken care of. We also need to ensure that the National Guard is being appropriately utilized in all its efforts, and are working with our congressional delegation to repeal section 1076 of the John Warner National Defense Authorization Act (Public Law 109-364), which undermines governors' authority over the National Guard.

I have had the great honor of seeing our men and women off as they bravely prepare for a tour abroad and also the great joy of welcoming them home after a job well done. We are exceedingly proud of the men and women of Massachusetts who have answered the call to duty and choose to devote their time and efforts to keeping us, our state and our nation safe. We will continue to support the homeland defense and war efforts and are committed to ensuring the quality of life and proper training of our Soldiers and Airmen. That is our obligation to all of you. It is an honor and a privilege to work with such skilled, devoted and honorable men and women every day; I look forward to helping the Guard write a new chapter in its long and storied history. ★

By Maj. Lisa Ahaesy, Joint Force Headquarters Public Affairs

The sound of the cannons could be heard clear across Boston Common.

Followed by the signal – an exchanged salute on the opposite sides of Beacon Street – a 13-gun cannon salute was fired by Massachusetts National Guard canoneers from the 1st Battalion, 101st Field Artillery Regiment. The custom firing of a cannon salute is a symbolic display of respect and trust. It set the stage for this historical day, but not due to its location or the fact that the 101st Field Artillery Regiment is the oldest serving artillery regiment in the United States Army. It was the day Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Carter made Massachusetts history – again – as the new adjutant general.

“Becoming the first black general in Massachusetts is an honor, but becoming the first black adjutant general is a distinct honor,” said Mr. Leonid E. Kondratiuk, Massachusetts National Guard’s director of historical services. According to Kondratiuk, the first African American Soldier joined the Massachusetts National Guard in 1643. “General Carter’s appointment is a logical culmination of the long service of the men and women who have served proudly before him,” he said.

A ceremony, held in the state House, immediately followed the cannon salute. Every seat in the House of Representatives chambers was filled, including the balcony, the aisles and all available standing room along the walls. Well-wishers spilled out into the hall where the ceremony was broadcast on a satellite screen. Some wore police uniforms representing Carter’s long and distinguished 30-year career in law enforcement. Others wore military uniforms, from nearly every branch of service, representing his 33 years in the Army National Guard. Many guests, including members of the public who came to witness history in the making, wore civilian attire.

Massachusetts Gov. Deval Patrick and the Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army for Massachusetts Mr. Edward Masterman presented Carter with the Legion of Merit for exceptional meritorious service while serving as chairman of the Massachusetts National Guard Equal Opportunity and Diversity Committee.

The Massachusetts National Guard's senior field artilleryman, Brig. Gen. Thomas Sellars, presented Carter with a ceremonial howitzer shell as a token of the personal honors salute rendered to the new adjutant general on the Boston Common.

The room rose to its feet and stood at attention as the ceremony's presiding officer, Gov. Patrick, administered the oath of office, followed by the ceremonial passing of the colors, thus officially appointing Carter as the Massachusetts National Guard's 41st adjutant general.

Applause exploded and the audience jumped to its feet in a standing ovation as the narrator, Lt. Col. Sterling MacLeod, introduced Carter. "Ladies and gentlemen it is my distinct pleasure to introduce the adjutant general for Massachusetts, Major General Joseph Carter."

The applause continued for several minutes before Carter's booming voice, filled with a mix of honor, modesty and full of promise, filled every inch of the House chambers. Carter thanked the men and women who served before him and made it possible for him to achieve his honored rank, "I must honor the sacrifices they made before me."

He also looked around the room and up into the balcony, and thanked everyone who took the time to share the day. He referenced a letter written in 1775, by then Gen. George Washington, our nation's first military commander, "When we assume the role of Soldier – we do not lay aside the citizen. This is the very essence of the National Guard. We are servants of the people and this great commonwealth."

Carter's voice was strong and loud, softening only when he publicly thanked his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carter; his wife, Rae; and their daughter, Emily. Following the official ceremony, the general and his wife greeted each guest individually in the member's lounge.

The general's mother, Betty Carter, stated she was sure her son would be a minister. "He loves people," she said. "He was always helping people, especially the elderly, and enjoys being part of what is needed to be done. He's a fantastic son. He has a great deal of respect and dignity. He cares about his family and he takes care of us all."

Mrs. Carter says she remembers when her son told her he was joining the Army. "I was nervous, but he said, 'Mom, if I'm a good Soldier I can go to college.'" She smiled and said, "He was looking out for his two younger sisters, Miriam and Maria, as he always did for me."

Carter proved himself right, because he went on to earn a bachelor's degree in organizational management from Lesley College, a master's degree in criminal justice administration from Atlanta University, and a second master's degree in strategic studies from the Army War College.

"He's a great son," Clarence Carter said, "Even as a child he was always respectful. I am very-very-very proud of him."

To high school senior Emily, her dad, General Carter, is the "best dad ever." Through a beaming smile she stated, "He's the best dad. He's fun and fun to be around." To give the rest of us a glimpse of the other side of our top military leader, Emily says her dad is the best cook. "He makes great chicken parmesan. My dad never settles for anything, because it can always be better. I couldn't ask for a better dad."

Rae Carter has been married to Carter for 25 years. "We are very proud of him," she said, "He doesn't change once he comes home. He's a good man. He is who he is no matter who you are."

"It was an emotional day for me," said Master Sgt. Helon Wiley, manager of the Massachusetts National Guard's African American special emphasis program. "It is a very important day for all of us, but particularly for those of us of African descent. I look forward to serving with him and accomplishing good things together."

"As stated today, he's part of a long legacy and another first for us; the 54th Regiment's main motivation is to promote a history that is relevant to people all over the world of all ages and genders," said Cpl. Emmet Bell-Sykes, president of the 54th Massachusetts Infantry Regiment, the oldest all-African American company formed in 1863 in New Bedford by Sgt. William H. Carney after escaping slavery by way of the Underground Railroad.

"I think it's great to see any good person, of sound moral and personal convictions, regardless of race or gender, achieve a distinct milestone such as this," said Senior Master Sgt. Peter Johnson, recruiting & retention superintendent for the Massachusetts Air National Guard.

Retired Maj. Gen. Wayne Wagner, the 37th adjutant general of the Massachusetts National Guard, has some advice for the commonwealth's newest leader, "Take care of the troops and make sure they have all they need. This goes without saying that Gen. Carter will do this with integrity."

Wagner served as the adjutant general from 1987 through 1993. He said his most rewarding moment as TAG was, "Seeing my troops come home safely following the first Gulf War. I wish the same for Gen. Carter."

Retired Brig. Gen. Julia J. Cleckley, former special assistant to the director, Army National Guard, National Guard Bureau said, "As the former chairman of the National Guard Diversity and Equal Opportunity Committee, Gen. Carter epitomizes the mission and role of that committee to embrace and appreciate diversity throughout the Guard. I am so proud of him. I speak throughout the country and I speak of General Carter as one of my heroes – as Massachusetts first African American general and I can now refer to him as the first African American adjutant general." ★

Maffei Shares Law Enforcement Experience

By Chief Warrant Officer 3 Richard Woodlock
Joint Force Headquarters Public Affairs

Lt. Col. Michael Maffei, a veteran of the Cambridge Police Department, recently returned from a tour in Iraq. Before being deployed, Maffei spent the previous 19 years in the aviation community where he was an accomplished rotary wing aircraft pilot, instructor pilot and instrument flight examiner. Recently, Maffei attended the United States Army War College at the Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Maffei deployed to Iraq in June 2006, and was assigned to the Multi-National Force-Iraq Headquarters. Maffei's newly acquired skills as a strategist coupled with his extensive background in law enforcement made him a perfect fit for his new assignment. Maffei focused his attention on the training of Iraq's police force and the transition of responsibility from coalition forces to the newly restructured force.

To put things in perspective, Baghdad is similar to New York City in many regards: land area, a population of about 5.2 million people and approximately 20,000 police officers employed. One thing that is very different though is the amount of violent crime and murders. Between January 2006 and August 2006 there were 949 murders in Baghdad (144 murders per 100K people) compared to 371 in NYC (4.5 murders per 100K people).

The Iraqi Police Force prior to Maffei's arrival was not functioning as a crime prevention force. Rather, the police holed up in fortified police stations going to the street only after a crime had been committed. This style of policing eroded public confidence in the police force, fueled organized crime and emboldened the insurgents.

"I really believed that my most significant accomplishment wasn't a particular product or event, but the strategic result of numerous events I was allowed to contribute to," said Maffei, "My lofty goal when I arrived was to shorten the war. It may sound absurd, but that is ultimately our purpose. Every day about 150,000 Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines get up and go to work in Iraq, not all come back. The focus of everything we do is on shortening the war, and therefore saving lives. I believe what I was allowed to accomplish in my time there contributed to that goal."

Maffei went to work helping to restructure the force, creating new tactics, techniques and procedures and finally, training the new force. TTP's were instituted to help the citizens of Baghdad deal with terrorism and crime, which included promoting local vigilance, educational programs in schools and in the workplace along with increased police patrols and added security checkpoints. These programs, together with police training academies, police training teams and public awareness, are the foundation for a complex plan to make the streets of Baghdad safer for all. ★

65th Public Affairs Operation Center

FORT DIX, N.J. — Morning arrives with the sudden chime of the alarm clock, yet sunrise is still hours away. The workday will be well underway before the first rays of summer sun appear on the horizon.

With little fanfare, the Soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 181st Infantry Regiment, file out of their barracks, form up and conduct the timeworn tradition of physical training. The steady drumbeat sound of the Soldiers' footfalls as they run to cadence is indistinguishable from other units throughout the country. Soldiers have started the day in this manner for generations.

Counted among the five oldest units in the U.S. military, the 1-181st has centuries of experience training and deploying troops to aid in America's defense. For the first time, the 1-181st is set to deploy directly to a combat theater in support of the Global War on Terrorism. A command and control group of more than 25 Massachusetts Soldiers arrived at Fort Dix on June 20 to mobilize in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom. The unit, commanded by Lt. Col. Michael Finer of Swampscott, will serve as a rear area operations center and be designated the 181st RAOC.

The 1-181st have focused their training on military decision-making and tactical operations. "We're unusual, where we focus on both the base defense and the mayor's cell," said Finer. In the past, security and the mayor's cell were overseen by separate units. The mayor's cell manages the daily operations of a forward operating base. "We're working hard to understand forward operating base doctrine," said Finer, "and to how it applies to a static defense."

"Overall the mission is not your typical infantry task. We'll be overseeing other security force elements at a forward operating base," said 1st Lt. Brian McNeil, force protection battle officer.

McNeil, a Shrewsbury native, has been in the 1-181st for two years and is on his first deployment. "Getting validated is a daunting task; I feel we're ready for anything though. The training is very similar to an everyday drill for us," he said. "The support has been good, and the unit assistants have been very helpful," McNeil added.

"It seems fitting that we're adding another chapter to the unit's proud history, but it has been very tough on the closest members of my family," said McNeil on his first deployment.

The 1-181st's lineage dates back to 1636 when it was formed as part of the Massachusetts Militia. The unit participated in the King Phillip's War, defending against raids conducted by Native Americans. More notable was the battle of Concord and Lexington, where Paul Revere led the regiment against the British.

The unit again answered the call during the Civil War, charged with defending the nation's capital before later action in Virginia. The regiment next saw action in Cuba in 1898, a land they would revisit more than a century later, during the Spanish-American War. In 1907 the 1-181st formally became a member of the National Guard.

The 1-181st fought in World War I in northern France, the Rhineland, the Ardennes Forest, and across Europe in World War II as member of the 26th "Yankee" Division. The 26th Infantry division was deactivated in 1991, and the 1-181st became part of the 29th Infantry Division.

With Sept. 11 and the Global War on Terrorism, elements of the 1-181st were among the first units mobilized for homeland defense. In September 2003 the battalion returned to Cuba and supported Joint Task Force Guantanamo.

Reorganized under the 26th Infantry Brigade, the unit has returned to wearing the famous "YD" patch of the Yankee Division.

"These Yankees don't suck" is boldly displayed on barracks' doors, demonstrating the Soldiers' pride in their unit's legacy while poking fun at the main rival of the Boston Red Sox.

Truer words may never be spoken. ★

Crossing Historical Paths

Task Force 134, Multi National Force-Iraq, controls detention operations

By 177th Military Police Brigade Public Affairs Office

Not often do two units with such illustrious pasts cross each other on the timeline of military history. But, such an encounter took place when the 1st Battalion, 181st Infantry Regiment replaced the 198th Signal Battalion as the garrison command element at Camp Cropper, Iraq, during a transfer of authority ceremony held on Sept. 10, 2007.

The 198th, led by Lt. Col. James Begley, is the parent organization for all of Delaware's National Guard units and traces its history back to 1776 when it was organized as Col. John Haslet's Delaware Regiment of the Continental Army, thus earning the regiment its title as, "The First Regiment of the First State." Begley said that the regiment is credited with saving the Army when they covered George Washington's 1776 retreat from Long Island. Many historians believe that without them, Washington's troops would have been routed, and the Revolution would have ended that very day, said Begley.

Over the next 200 years, the regiment saw action in every major conflict except the Spanish-American War and Vietnam. Notably, it earned 11 battle streamers during the Civil War and, during World War II, was the first U.S. unit to leave for overseas after the attack on Pearl Harbor. In 1970, the regiment was reorganized into the organization that carries the lineage and honors today, the 198th Signal Battalion. During its more than 200 year history, the Citizen-Soldiers of the First Delaware Regiment have spent a cumulative total of 23 years on active duty, ending with their year spent here in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

In view of the 198th's remarkable place in America's history, Begley said he was surprised and pleased to learn of the 1-181st's equally impressive lineage. He said he felt it was especially appropriate for the 1-181st to replace the 198th.

The 1-181st Infantry Regiment, based out of Worcester, and commanded by Lt. Col. Michael Finer, is credited as being one of the five oldest units in the U.S. military and is considered America's oldest infantry outfit. Formed in 1636 as part of the Massachusetts Militia, the regiment fought during the King Phillips War against raids by Native Americans. In 1775, members of the regiment stood up against British forces on Lexington Green and at Concord, taking part in, "The Shot Heard Round the World."

The 1-181st fought valiantly and with honors in all major U.S. conflicts up to the Korean War. In the last several years, many of the regiment's warriors served on active duty missions including Bosnia, Guantanamo Bay, Hurricane Katrina, and now in Kosovo, Afghanistan and Iraq.

Finer said their unit's history is a great source of pride amongst themselves. "We are carrying on a tradition established more than 370 years ago when militiamen of Massachusetts came together to defend their homes and villages," he said.

Carrying on that tradition here at Camp Cropper is important to Finer and he credits the skill and professionalism of the 198th before them to help him succeed, he said. "They have helped set us up for success in many ways, and we have an opportunity to do well during our time in Iraq," he said. "We intend to do the same for our replacements when the mission comes to an end."

The 1-181st not only oversees base defense but supervises engineering projects, repairs and improvements, badging procedures, and morale, welfare and recreation activities. While these are not traditional infantry missions, that fact doesn't seem to bother Finer. "Taking care of people has always been a traditional role for the infantry, regardless of the specific task at hand." He said they are willing and able to learn new tactics, techniques and procedures to adjust to accomplish the mission. "We are an agile unit," said Finer. "Our shaping and sustaining operations are critical to victory and accomplishing Task Force 134's end-state."

Finer said that he feels that their efforts here in Iraq are just as important as the militiamen's were over 300 years ago, and while they hope to earn their place in history too, it's not what drives them to serve. "It has always been about our families, fellow Soldiers and service members and a sense of duty. We're proud to have joined the long line of patriots who gave their time and occasionally their lives," he said. "Only time will tell if our sacrifices will be as historic as those from the past." ★

101st Engineers Build Border Security

By Col. Paul G. Smith, 51st Troop Command

While most New Englanders head to the beach to avoid the summer heat, 159 soldiers of the 101st Engineer Battalion spent three weeks in a slightly different climate. Like the beach, there was plenty of sun and plenty of sand in southern Arizona, but, with daily temperatures approaching 120 degrees, the similarities ended there.

The Engineers participated in Operation Jump Start from June 16 to July 8, 2007, an interagency effort to strengthen the Southwest Border against illegal immigration and organized crime. This highly successful initiative has been credited with significantly reducing illegal activity and improving security along the Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California border regions.

Soldiers of the 181st Engineer Company, 379th Engineer Company, 189th Engineer Detachment and 272nd Chemical Company put their skills to good use in the region by building steel walls in residential areas, constructing vehicle barriers in the desert, and by improving access roads that will enable rapid response from Border Patrol agents. In some of the work areas, the U.S. – Mexico border had been marked only by a century old concrete marker or a few strands of rusty barbed wire before the engineers arrived.

Although contact with illegal immigrants was restricted by the rules of engagement, small bands of exhausted illegals were frequently observed close by while they awaited apprehension by the Border Patrol. Soldiers were reminded of the hostile nature of the environment when work was halted after the discovery of a deceased border crosser near the work area. Despite the brutal climate and dangerous wildlife, there were no heat casualties and only one minor encounter with a scorpion.

Engineers from the 379th were assigned to road improvement within the Tohono O'Odham Indian Reservation, where all work activities were coordinated with Tribal Council representatives and archaeologists. In this historic and culturally significant area, it was important to respect tribal and traditional customs that seemed, at times, a bit strange to New Englanders. At one point, road work was halted while tribal elders were consulted about how close vehicles could approach a culturally valued landmark. In the end, though, the road went through and the mission was accomplished.

"Our Soldiers really enjoyed the mission," said Sergeant First Class Earle Eldridge, operations sergeant of the 379th Engineer Company. "They had the chance to get plenty of stick time that they don't always get the chance to have. They understood the need to assist the Border Patrol and complete an important job for the nation." ★

972nd Military Police Train for Deployment

By Ryan Morton, Public Affairs Staff, Fort Dix Public Affairs Office

After mobilizing more than 8,000 Soldiers, Sailors, and Airmen in the first half of 2007, Fort Dix still leads the way in deploying military personnel to fight in the Global War on Terrorism. The 972nd Military Police Company is the most recent unit to complete training at the installation for a tour in Iraq.

These Soldiers are part of the Massachusetts National Guard, hailing from Reading, Mass. It is a company sized element training as a Police Transition Team, or PTT, with the mission of training the Iraqi police forces. In preparation for this task the Soldiers performed the Army Training Evaluation Program, or ARTEP. The ARTEP represents the final test a unit must perform to a satisfactory level before deploying.

In this particular training scenario, Soldiers go to a police station and give instruction to a group of Iraqi police cadets played by role players called Civilians on the Battlefield, or COBs. The MPs teach the cadets how to perform a patrol down a city or town street.

The Soldiers and COBs line up on foot and in Humvees patrolling down the Balad streets. During the patrol, they confront various simulated obstacles such as Improvised Explosive Devices (IEDs), roadside bombs and sniper fire. They have to complete the patrol and are graded on how they handle the obstacles, train the Iraqi police cadets and completion of the mission.

The 972nd MP Co. has been at Fort Dix training since mid-July. This unit, like many National Guard and Reserve units in today's military, has veterans who have already served in OIF and OEF.

"It's great having these experienced Soldiers here because they offer a lot of training and specific advice on what to do," 2nd Lt. Chris Cunningham said.

This PTT mission has a unique set of variables and one main goal.

"Our primary job is transitioning the Iraqi police from a force that's very dependent on us to instilling in them the knowledge and know-how to become independent," Cunningham said. ★

The 65th PAOC Relieves the 10th

By Spc. James T. Deady, 65th Public Affairs Operation Center, Multi-National Force-Iraq

Crowded into the press conference room where key coalition and Iraqi leaders address international media agencies, Soldiers from the 65th and 10th Public Affairs Operation Centers sat in anticipation of a ceremony where warm welcomes and poignant farewells followed.

The transfer of authority ceremony, held Sept. 8, welcomed the incoming 65th PAOC, Massachusetts Army National Guard from Lexington. Farewells and praise were aimed at the 10th PAOC based out of Fort McPherson, Ga., after completing a deployment, which lasted over a year, to operate the Multi-National Force-Iraq Combined Press Information Center in Baghdad.

The 65th PAOC is the first National Guard unit to run the CPIC. The 65th PAOC assumed the responsibilities of the CPIC in Baghdad from the 10th PAOC. Tasking consists of media escorting, media embedding, media credentialing, international media engagement teams, operations and briefings, and the media press desk.

CPIC operations are high level missions with a broad span of tasks. Lt. Col. Charles H. Perenick, 65th PAOC commander and MNF-I director of the CPIC, is pleased and confident in his team's ability to accept the challenging roles.

"I know my staff and I will do an outstanding job while we're here and we're honored to be the first National Guard unit to operate the CPIC," said Perenick. "Everything we learned as a unit in Massachusetts helps us to be professional, diverse, flexible and open-minded."

Running the CPIC isn't the first time the Massachusetts Army National Guard it has set precedence. The Massachusetts National Guard marked its primacy when it began Dec. 13, 1636, as the Massachusetts Militia. When the Revolutionary War began April 19, 1775, in Lexington, Mass., Massachusetts Guard members were the first on the battlefield. It is fitting that members are still immortalizing its heritage.

The 65th PAOC, activated on June 2, trained for their deployment to Iraq at Fort Dix, N.J. The unit will be deployed in Iraq until the summer of 2008, at which time they will receive their farewell and welcome another National Guard unit to replace and run the CPIC. ★

O'Sullivan is New Command Chief Warrant Officer

By Sgt. 1st Class Daniel Maes, Joint Force Headquarters Public Affairs

On Sept. 13, 2007, Chief Warrant Officer 5 Thomas M. O'Sullivan, of Medway, is the new command chief warrant officer of the Army National Guard. As such, he is the principal advisor to the director of the Army National Guard for all matters pertaining to management, accessions, training and utilization of the more than 9,000 warrant officers of the Army National Guard. His duties also include representing the director at meetings, conferences and seminars pertaining to warrant officer issues and coordinating information flow from the National Guard Bureau to the Command Chief Warrant Officers of the 54 states and territories.

O'Sullivan has served in the National Guard for nearly 40 years, beginning his career in "The Nation's First," the 1st Battalion, 182d Infantry Regiment. He began his career as an enlisted Soldier, rising to the rank of sergeant first class. In 1981, he accepted an appointment as warrant officer and has since held various positions throughout the Massachusetts Army National Guard culminating with his appointment as the first command chief warrant officer for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 2001. In civilian life, O'Sullivan worked for nearly 30 years at the Shawsheen Valley Vocational Technical High School in Billerica. In 2006, he left his position as director of special education at the school after receiving a "by-name" request to serve as a senior policy analyst in the J5 section at National Guard Bureau. O'Sullivan served full-time there until his appointment as the Army National Guard's command chief warrant officer in mid-September.

O'Sullivan's family is a source of pride and strength for him while he serves in Washington, D.C. His wife, Elizabeth, a recent retiree from the Massachusetts Army National Guard, resides at the family home in Medway. They have four children, Erin, Bryan, Tess and Thomas; and a granddaughter, Jordan. The Minuteman recently had the opportunity to talk with O'Sullivan about his career, the Guard and his new assignment.

Q What does the future hold for warrant officers in the Army National Guard?

A "As the Guard continues to transition from a strategic reserve to an operational force, warrant officers will have an increasingly significant impact at all command levels."

Q What is the biggest change to the Army National Guard that you've witnessed during your career?

A "Since the First Muster in 1636, this country has never asked for a larger and more sustained commitment from its Citizen-Soldiers. Never before have we been called upon as an operational force while simultaneously and holistically performing our dual role as Citizen-Soldiers of Massachusetts."

Q Specifically, how have warrant officers and the warrant officer program changed?

A "While continuing to serve as the Army's preeminent source of technical expertise, we are increasingly called upon to serve as leaders. As such, we are constantly seeking the best and brightest non-commissioned officers to serve in our ranks as soon as they are qualified to do so. The Warrant Officer Corps is aggressively identifying technical expertise earlier in the potential candidate's career to maximize the warrant officers' impact on the operational force over a career."

Q Will warrant officers move into roles that were traditionally held by commissioned officers?

A "Warrant officers have been commissioned upon reaching chief warrant officer 2 since the early 1990s. From then on, in addition to our traditional role as technical experts, we have been called upon to serve as leaders. The role warrant officers have played as force multipliers has never been more crucial than it is today."

Q What was the biggest challenge of your career?

A "Accepting the tremendous responsibilities of serving as the first command chief warrant officer of our great state of Massachusetts."

Q Who are your mentors?

A "As an infantry non-commissioned officer, I had many exceptional warrant officer mentors, such as Chief Warrant Officer 4 Charles L. Doyle. As a senior warrant officer, I have to say that my greatest mentor is retired Sgt. 1st Class Elizabeth A. O'Sullivan. On a daily basis, she reminds me of where I come from; a perspective no officer should ever forget."

Q What advice would you give to our young Soldiers who are beginning their careers?

A "Always follow the Army Values: Loyalty, Duty, Respect, Selfless Service, Honor, Integrity and Personal Courage. Take advantage of all the education services provided to you. Become the best, become a warrant officer!"

From World War II to Global War on Terror

By 1st Lt. John Quinn, 1st Battalion,
181st Infantry Regiment

Vincent J. Saccone, who enlisted as a medic in 1939 and served as a member of the Yankee Division, 26th ID, during World War II, helped promote his grandson, Maj. Kenneth Wisniewski at Fort Dix, N.J., on Aug. 3.

"It's an honor to put this on you," Saccone told his grandson as he affixed the rank of major onto his ACUs. "Good luck, God speed and come back home soon," he said.

Wisniewski is deployed to help the 1-181 IN, which is part of the 26th (Yankee) Brigade Combat Team, operate a Forward Operating Base on the outskirts of Baghdad, Iraq. Saccone retired as a chief warrant officer 3 after 42 years of service in the Massachusetts Army National Guard.

"In 1993, the YD patch was lost when the division was retired," Saccone said, adding he has remained extremely involved in the Yankee Division Association for many years. He even recruited his grandson into the group.

"I never left, I was glad to see it come back," Saccone said, adding he is extremely proud that 26th (Yankee) Brigade Combat Team resurrected the YD as its insignia in 2006 and that his grandson will wear the patch during a combat tour in Iraq.

Wisniewski's wife, Holly, and their 4-month-old son, Kenneth IV, drove Saccone, 85, and his wife, Donetta, 87, who served as a second lieutenant in the nurse corps during World War II, down to Fort Dix, N.J., from their homes in Lakeville.

The statue in the background is called "The Ultimate Weapon" and is located in front of the headquarters building at Fort Dix. ★

Massachusetts Air National Guard Partners with the United States Air Force

Story by 102nd Fighter Wing Public Affairs Office

As part of the Air Force's Total Force Integration initiatives, Massachusetts' Air National Guard is teaming with the Air Force to increase augmentation of an Air Operations Center component Numbered Air Force Headquarters organization.

Leveraging the experience of Massachusetts Air National Guard members, the unit plans, commands, controls and executes air, space and information capabilities across a full range of military operations. These operations are a force multiplier in day-to-day operations to major commands supporting joint commanders through increased communications, intelligence and weather information to combatant commanders.

Air Force officials have integrated lessons learned from past conflicts to develop this new concept for command and control of the service's fighting forces. The result is the establishment of regionally or functionally aligned Air Force component Major Commands/component NAF headquarters worldwide designed to facilitate the execution and planning of air and space power more efficiently.

Lt. Gen. Craig R. McKinley, Director of the Air National Guard, is encouraged by this change and continues to work to ensure that the ANG remains an important partner in the nation's defense. "This move is one of many showing the Air Force is committed to involving the Air National Guard in all missions," he said.

It also allows the Massachusetts Governor to maintain critical skills to meet homeland defense and homeland security missions. The Massachusetts Air National Guard, Air Force and the National Guard Bureau are working on a transition and training schedule to ensure an effective transition for the wing.

Col. Anthony Schiavi, commander of the 102nd Fighter Wing commented, "This was a major milestone for us. Even though we were leaning very far forward in hiring for this mission, planning for facility upgrades, etc., a formal announcement was crucial in ensuring the commitment of the Air Force and National Guard Bureau to actually make it a reality. That announcement was made public by our governor and commented on by both Congressman Delahunt and Senator Kennedy in front of over 1,000 wing members at this year's Family Day. It was the perfect venue for such an important announcement as it puts our wing, and our people, on a path to a secure future. There is still a lot of work to do, but this is a major milestone along the way." ★

New Otis Fire Crash and Rescue Station Open for Business

By Cliff McDonald, Public Affairs Staff, 102d Fighter Wing

The new Otis Fire Crash and Rescue Station is but one of a series of new construction and base improvements championed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Rep. William D. Delehunt to transform the Massachusetts Military Reservation from an aging base fraught with environmental problems to a state-of-the-art facility designed to meet the nation's emerging security needs.

The new project replaced an existing antiquated fire station originally built in the early 1950s that was ill equipped to handle the complexity of current base fire fighting operations. The new facility supports all aircraft at the Massachusetts Military Reservation including the US Coast Guard, the Army National Guard – and the F-15s belonging to the 102nd Fighter Wing that streaked toward New York in response to the September 11 attacks.

This project is the first base construction project approved in two decades, and also included construction of a fire-fighting equipment storage facility that will protect the MMR and assist local firefighters in surrounding towns. The Otis station is a key provider of mutual aid to local communities surrounding the MMR.

In recent years, Delahunt has worked to position the MMR to become a regional center for homeland security training. A Pentagon study initiated by Delahunt concluded that the MMR should be a regional training center – especially given the presence of the Army National Guard, the Air National Guard and the U.S. Coast Guard. The Pentagon noted new training requirements of the military, the Coast Guard's expanded role in regional port security, law enforcement and maritime safety as well as first responder and public safety training at the MMR.

Each modernization step takes us closer to realizing the potential of this unique military resource that just a few years ago seemed inconceivable. Today, the MMR is a national model for environmentally responsible, innovative reuse of our military facilities. ★

Canada Presents Brigadier General with Meritorious Service Cross

By Acting Sub-lieutenant David Lavallee, 1st Canadian Air Division Public Affairs

1ST CANADIAN AIR DIVISION, WINNIPEG, MAN. – United States Air Force Brig. Gen. Donald Quenneville traveled to Ottawa on Friday, Oct. 12, to receive a Meritorious Service Cross (Military Division) from Her Excellency the Right Honorable Michaëlle Jean, Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Canada.

Quenneville served as the deputy commander of the Canadian NORAD Region, which is headquartered here at 1 Canadian Air Division in Winnipeg, from Aug. 1, 2004, until July 31, 2007. In this role, he was the senior American representative in Canada and advised the commander on NORAD matters. During his time in Winnipeg, Brig. Gen. Quenneville worked closely with Canadian officers and was part of many positive changes. It was for his outstanding work during that tenure that he was presented with his prestigious award.

“Never before have I received such an award from a military other than that of the United States,” he said. “It was really a tremendous honor to accept this from the Governor General.”

Two examples of Quenneville’s work, which were cited with his award, include the development of the national Air Tasking Order and the creation of a Space Operations Cell here in Canada. The ATO helped to streamline the process for all Canadian Forces commands to request air support, which helped to improve the efficiency of air support provision in Canada. The SOC helped establish processes that allow the 1 Canadian Air Division personnel to access space-based resources to enhance operational support to NORAD and the Canadian commands.

The citation for Quenneville’s award speaks volumes about his contribution to Canada, it reads: “His vision and expert knowledge contributed significantly to the advancement of defense programs critical to Canada. Brigadier General Quenneville’s dedication and efforts have contributed to continental security and constitute unique and unparalleled service to Canada.”

Despite his contributions, Quenneville maintains that it was always a team effort.

“One of the things I noted among the Canadian forces and U.S. Air Force personnel across Canada was an ongoing commitment to excellence,” he said. “I would not have been able to accomplish what I did without their support, for which I am grateful.”

Quenneville served in the U.S. Air Force and the Massachusetts Air National Guard for 36 years, and retired this summer after completing his tour in Winnipeg. He now lives with his wife, Maggie, in Plymouth. ★

“His vision and expert knowledge contributed significantly to the advancement of defense programs critical to Canada. Brigadier General Quenneville’s dedication and efforts have contributed to continental security and constitute unique and unparalleled service to Canada.”

The Third Annual Black History Month Military Ball will be held Saturday, Feb. 16, 2008, at the Holiday Inn Hotel and Conference Center in Dedham. The event strives to recognize, educate and celebrate the achievements and contributions of people with African heritage. This year's ball includes a tribute to the "Black Bird Men," more commonly known as The Tuskegee Airmen.

There will be various forms of entertainment and historical displays; guests may choose to join the annual audience choir in singing the Black National Anthem. It is a time to rekindle friendships and enjoy a good party.

The African American Special Emphasis Program, an affiliate of the Massachusetts National Guard Federal Diversity Group is proud to host the Third Annual Black History Month Military Ball. For more information on this event, you can call (508) 233-6767. ★

The Value of a Staff Ride – Saratoga Revisited

2nd Lt. Matthew Winn discusses intelligence at General Burgoyne's headquarters at the Saratoga battlefield.

By 2nd Lt. Peter F. Kurek, Company C, 26th BSTB

On the morning of Sept. 29, the officers and staff NCOs of the 26th Brigade Special Troops

Battalion stepped back in time when they walked the crucial battlefield in upstate New York. With two battles spread out over 18 days beginning on Sept. 19, 1777, the Battle of Saratoga marks the turning point in the American Revolution.

It was “the Decisive Point” of the American Revolution. Where we began to win and the enemy began to lose ... as the semi-doctrinal definition goes. The British were moving south from Canada towards Albany, N.Y., looking to cut the New England colonies off from the south and to crush the rebellion once and for all. However the red coats out-ran their supply lines.

The American forces were looking for a major victory that would prove their resolve for independence to European powers such as France and Spain with the hopes of them providing aid and joining the fight.

The BSTB junior officers were assigned buddy teams to research and discuss one of seven War Fighting Functions; intelligence, movement and maneuver, fire support, sustainment, protection, command and control. The addition of leadership creates The Elements of Combat Power. Each team had to relate their function to what happened in the battle at 10 different stops.

The staff ride provided opportunity for professional staff development outside of the normal drill environment. “Staff rides provide a basis for experiential learning at a low expense,” explains Lt. Col. Francis B. Magurn, the 26th BSTB’s commander.

“Situational awareness of history will improve future battle planning,” adds Command Sgt. Maj. Normand G. Dubois, the battalion’s command sergeant major.

By studying the details of a specific campaign, officers can use the successes and failures of previous battles in planning future battles.

Adding his input, 2nd Lt. Kyle Knowles, nicknamed “Lieutenant Knowledge,” said, “I learned to never out-run my supply lines as the British did. They paid a heavy burden when they depended upon a clear route from Montreal, and the Americans were supplied from Albany.”

In addition to specific lessons learned from the battle, junior officers had an opportunity to network and draw upon the experiences of other officers in the battalion. Officers freely interacted and exchanged ideas and experiences about current events and how they relate to lessons learned from this battle.

In addition to an awards ceremony and two surprise promotions along the battlefield route, the staff ride is certain to help any unit’s esprit de corps and professional knowledge. ★

Lt. Col. Fridmann Awarded

On November 2, 2007, Lt. Col. Gerard Fridmann received the Bronze Star Medal and the Defense Meritorious Service Medal for his service during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Fridmann recently returned to Massachusetts after serving for 32 months in Iraq during three consecutive combat tours with the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Fridmann initially performed as the transition officer of Defense Intelligence Agency Iraq Survey Group, the organization that searched for evidence of Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction and former regime crimes. He was then appointed deputy chief of DIA's Defense Intelligence Support Office-Iraq helping oversee all DIA personnel and assets and ensuring uninterrupted mission support at numerous sites throughout the Operation Iraqi Freedom and CENTCOM combat zone areas.

Fridmann is a standardization instructor pilot and instrument flight examiner with more than 3,000 hours in Army helicopters. He is currently assigned to special projects at Joint Force Headquarters, Massachusetts National Guard.

On a clear sunny day Massachusetts Army National Guard's 101st Regiment Regional Training Institute held a graduation ceremony for Officer Candidate School, Class 74.

The day brought together dignitaries from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts and the 1st Corps of Cadets, previous OCS Graduates, friends and family members of the graduating class.

"You are making a significant contribution during a very challenging time in our country's history."

- Col. John G. Chapman

Speaking to Class 74, Col. John G. Chapman encouraged the graduates to "continue to serve as Citizen-Soldiers, continue to be a leader and defender of freedom, and continue to make a difference for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and your nation." Chapman concluded, "You are making a significant contribution during a very challenging time in our country's history."

Addressing the soon to be commissioned candidates Brig. Gen. Thomas J. Sellers, commander Joint Force Headquarters Massachusetts National Guard, welcomed them into the officer corps and challenged them to remember these important tenets, "Easy is not an option, trust in your abilities and lead from the front!"

Sellers went on to state what a remarkable time to become a commissioned officer when the National Guard is a "viable operational force critical to our nations defense."

Class leader 2nd Lt. David E. Wilson implored his fellow lieutenants "to continue to learn and seek knowledge and continue to know and address weaknesses while maintaining your strengths." ★

Amesbury Mayor Signs Statement of Support

By Lt. Col. Pat McNamara, 253rd Combat Communications Group

The Massachusetts Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) announced that Amesbury Mayor Thatcher W. Kezer III signed a statement of support on Oct. 16th. The certificate signifies an employer's support of all federal and state laws regarding the employment and re-employment of members of the National Guard and Reserve.

In doing so, Kezer will joined the leaders of more than 175 Massachusetts cities and towns that have signed statements of support since 9/11. "What is so unique about this signing is that Kezer is the only elected leader of any community in Massachusetts who is a member of the National Guard or Reserve. Kezer is an officer in the Massachusetts Air National Guard assigned to the 253rd Combat Communications Group, Otis ANG Base, Mass.," said David St. Germain, state vice chair of ESGR.

In addition to Kezer, the Chiefs of the Amesbury Fire Department and the Amesbury Police Department signed the statement of support. Both town departments have members of the Guard and Reserve on staff.

For more information on the ESGR program, contact David St. Germain at (508) 994-2476. ★

Combat Medical Advanced Skills Summer Training

The Massachusetts National Guard Regional Training Institute, in cooperation with 126 Brigade Support Battalion, conducted Combat Medical Advanced Skills Training at Camp Edwards during Annual Training 2007. This new 30-hour course is required of all combat medic Soldiers.

According to 1st Sgt. Dan Patterson, Charlie Company, 126th Brigade Support Battalion, 100 percent of Soldiers passed the course and six CMAST trainers were certified. Patterson reports that course participants will be able to use continuing education credits from the course for civilian Emergency Medical Technician re-certification requirements. For more information on CMAST courses, please consult the Regional Training Institute. ★

Equal Opportunity Leader

By Maj. Jack McKenna, Joint Force Headquarters Public Affairs

Imagine that you have completed basic and advanced individual training. And now, after collecting a few years of training under your belt, you're finally fully qualified on your individual weapon and the unit's crew-served weapons. The long anticipated mobilization order arrives and you hit the mob site running ... no problem; you are trained and ready to go.

Once in theater, however, things are different. You are no longer doing your assigned job, instead you find yourself constantly getting assigned tasks that "keep you in the wire." Your first sergeant tells you that because you remind him of his own 19-year-old daughter he isn't letting you go outside the "wire." Who do you turn to for help?

The answer: your unit's Equal Opportunity Leader. New regulations state unit commanders must appoint an Equal Opportunity Leader. If your unit is deploying, it is expected to arrive at the mobilization site with a Department of Army certified EOL. However, due to time constraints the mobilization station will no longer provide the training.

As a result, the EOL course proponent school, located at Fort Jackson, fielded a 60-hour EOL training and certification course to the National Guard Bureau for immediate implementation.

Under the direction of Lt. Col. Doris Lopilato, the Senior Northeast Regional Representative to the Army National Guard's National Equal Opportunity/Equal Employment Opportunity Diversity Committee, Lt. Col. David Cuttle and CW5 William Bouchard of the State Equal Employment Management Office became the first to offer the Department of the Army's Equal Opportunity Leader Course at Camp Edwards last August.

Scenarios just like the one above were discussed in a group setting with the 14 students in attendance from throughout New England. The curriculum consisted of Army learning styles indicators, the army's EO program and policies, role of the EOA and EOL, socialization process, values, attitudes, behaviors, communications process, effective and active listening and effective feedback. Students were also required to complete assignments independent of the classroom.

Thanks to the hard work of Lopilato and her team, the course was a great success and 14 soldiers are now deployable as Equal Opportunity Leaders for their respective organizations. ★

Summertime at the Base Where Working is a Learning Experience

By Catherine Tonello, Public Affairs Staff, 102d Fighter Wing

The Title V Student Temporary Employment Program, also known as STEP, is an opportunity for high school and college students to experience a summer job like no other.

While other students may just “kick back” during the summer, STEP employees are given the opportunity to be involved with our nation’s military. Whether it’s a position as an office aid, general laborer or a motor vehicle operator, students perform their job in a unique context, surrounded by dedicated members of the Air National Guard.

The 102nd Fighter Wing typically hires clerical and general laborer positions. Kimberly Scudder, the wing director of civilian personnel says that these “STEP employees gain marketable skills and earn money while enjoying their summer vacation.” The STEP employees are thoroughly briefed on their job as well as the overall purpose and management of the fighter wing.

Of course, one of the many orientation briefings is from an Air National Guard Recruiter. The students are certainly encouraged to consider joining the branch they are working with.

Typically, students are hired for 60-90 days, with a start date sometime in the month of May or June. As always, the positions are temporary. Out of the twenty students that were hired, fifteen are general laborers and five are administrative clerks in various offices around the wing.

Returning as one of those five clerks is Allison Akeley. She worked last year in the contracting office and is currently in operations administration. Akeley is a recent graduate of the New Testament Christian School. She is considering attending the University of Maine in Augusta with a major in forensic science. She heard about STEP through her sister Andrea Akeley, who works in the 102nd Medical Clinic. As an administrative clerk in operations, Akeley does a lot of clerical work, such as filing, copying, shredding, and getting the mail. She also fills out and distributes orders. One of the most exciting parts of her summer was going on the flight line to watch the jets take off. Akeley said that she would like to return to Otis next year; however, her family will be moving to Maine this coming winter. Overall, Akeley said that she has enjoyed working on the base and interacting with the different members of the wing.

It’s the first year at the base for college student Suzanne Green. She is majoring in business management at Cape Cod Community College. She heard about the student employment program through a friend who has worked at Otis for the past few years. So far, Green has been trained as an administrative clerk to organize orders for training and leave. She also handles entering time cards every other week. Approved request forms are sent to her to be printed and filed. Compared to other summer jobs that she has had, she said that this job is very different. There is more computer work involved, and she feels that it has been a great learning experience. When asked if she would apply again, Green said that she would really like to. Another option that she’s considering is coming on part time during the school year.

It is Kelly Duchemin’s first year at Otis, but close family friend, Kimberly Scudder, has been encouraging her to apply for some time. This college junior played Division I field hockey in Maine before transferring to Bridgewater State College to major in business management. She is being trained as an administrative clerk in human resources this summer. Duchemin said that with this job she is able to interact with a lot of different people. She answers phones, enters information into computers, and works with a maintenance database that keeps track of employee information. She said that she would like to apply again next year, and possibly come on part time during the school year if her schedule allows.

Josh Little-Parks is no stranger to the program or the base. This summer is his fifth year working as a summer hire. Little-Parks is a junior at Thomas College in Waterville, Maine. He is majoring in criminal justice. He also plays for the school’s Division III basketball team as a guard. For the past five summers, Little-Parks has been a general laborer on Otis. His job includes cutting grass, planting shrubs and making sure the base grounds are presentable. He said that he enjoys his job and plans on coming back next year.

Allen Nancarrow is also a general laborer at Otis this summer. This is his third summer working on the base. He enjoys the outdoor work and how quickly the days pass. This Bourne High School graduate will be attending Cape Cod Community College for his first year of college. He then plans on transferring to the Universal Technical Institute. Like Little-Parks, Nancarrow is involved with “base beautification,” as the boys jokingly called it. If possible, Nancarrow said that he would like to work year round while attending school full time.

The benefits and experiences are ones that these students are sure to remember. The skills that they have learned will give them a platform from which to launch whatever career they choose.

Whether they join the military, or make a career as a civilian, the National Guard has provided these students with the opportunity to improve basic professional skills, which will be useful in any occupation. ★
